

KarenZupko & Associates, Inc.

Does Your Practice Use a Collection Agency? Combined Surgical Specialties Survey

---

Summary of Results

April 2006

625 North Michigan Avenue, Suite 702
Chicago, IL 60611
www.karenezupko.com
(312) 642-5616 phone
(312) 642-5571 fax

Table of Contents

---

Letter from Karen Zupko, President

Methodology

Survey Results

    Survey Respondent Demographics

    Your Collection Agency: The Basics

    Your Collection Agency: Let's Talk About Money

No part of this material may be quoted, reproduced, or paraphrased without permission from KarenZupko & Associates, Inc.

KarenZupko & Associates, Inc.

Letter from the President

---

Dear Friend:

This summary of the March 2006 results from the KZA “Does Your Practice Use a Collection Agency?” Alert survey covers several aspects of important business issues facing surgical practices.

- What does your practice do about past-due accounts?
- Can you trust a collection agency to help you?
- What process should your practice have in place to turn accounts over to a collection agency?
- How much can you expect a collection agency to collect for your practice?

I hope you find the results informative as you look at your accounts receivable and consider your options. I know we are already using the results in our consultative work with clients across the country who are committed to making positive improvements in the way they handle their collection issues. I look forward to hearing how some of you utilize this data—be sure to send me an e-mail at karenzupko@aol.com with your comments.

While you are on the Internet, be sure and bookmark the KZA homepage—www.karenzupko.com. Many of you continue to benefit from the training and expertise of the Coding Courses taught by KZA experts—visit www.karenzupko.com/Workshops/main.htm for information on the 2006 course dates and locations for your specialty.

We welcome your feedback on the survey—it is only with your feedback that we can continue to improve this important information source.

Karen A. Zupko
President

Methodology

---

In March 2006, KZA sent an e-mail “Alert” with a link to our online survey “Does Your Practice Use a Collection Agency?” to a combined 2,062 subscribers in our General Surgery, Neurosurgery, and Plastic Surgery communities.

The survey was made available online by clicking the web link provided in the notification e-mail. Respondents to the survey were a combination of surgeons, office managers, administrators, and billers. About 16% of respondents completing the survey were physicians.

Respondents completed the survey by reviewing questions and selecting answer from a pre-set menu of responses. In addition, respondents entered practice demographic information in free form entry fields.

KZA received 112 survey returns during the month of March 2006 for a return rate of 5.4%. Results were entered into a database and checked for data entry accuracy.

KZA Observations About Responses

---

Many physicians' reluctance in using a collection agency has waned as patient debts have dramatically increased.

Using a law firm or reputable agency, one endorsed by medical societies and organizations, ensures that the collection techniques used are appropriate. This reduces anxiety about having a third party collect.

Among the respondents, it is significant to note that a majority—some 39%—report turning over accounts when they are 90 days past due. Thirty-three percent of practices report turning accounts over at 120 days. Beyond this point, accounts become more difficult to collect.

Along the same lines, we see that 55% of practices say that they turn over accounts monthly. This means that the third party has a better chance of successfully collecting for you. Not surprising, we note that 16% of the respondents frankly report that “getting a doctor to sit down and do the review” is a challenge.

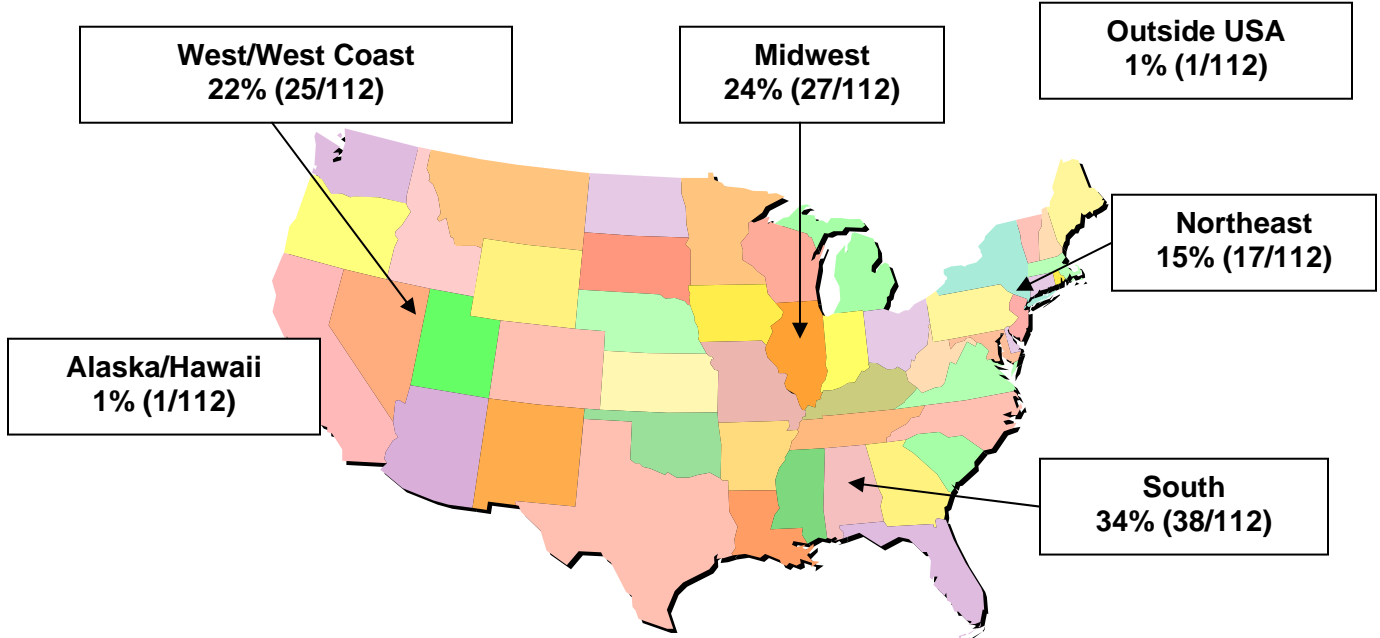

The hour spent reviewing accounts may be the most profitable the doctor spends on business issues. There are patients who simply won't pay until an outside party becomes involved.

Survey Respondent Demographics

The basic demographics of our survey respondents show that the largest group of them—44% (49/112)—are from solo practices.

How many physicians are in your practice?
Solo	44%	49/112
2-4	31%	35/112
5-8	11%	12/112
9-12	5%	6/112
13-20	5%	6/112
Over 20	4%	4/112

Respondents live all over the United States (and one respondent lives outside of the U.S.). More than a third are in the South, and nearly 25% in the Midwest. California is the state with the most respondents (13), followed by Texas (9), New York (8), and Ohio (8).

Your Collection Agency: The Basics

Ninety-one percent of the respondents (102/112) say their practice uses a collection agency. Those who do not use a collection agency believe that they can achieve better results on their own or through small-claims court, and say that collection agencies are too expensive and unreliable. A majority—80% (89/112)—of respondents use only one collection agency while 13% (15/112) use two (and the remainder do not use an agency). Thirty-seven percent (41/112) of respondents said their collection agency is affiliated with a law firm that handles liens. Twenty-five percent (28/112) said their agency has no such affiliation while 32% (36/112) had no idea.

It is important to turn over late accounts to your collection agency in a timely manner; otherwise, you risk not collecting on the debts at all. Most practices turn a patient's accounts over within the first 120 days, and on a monthly basis.

Over 120 days is too late to turn over delinquent accounts!

Do you turn accounts over if the patient has not responded to statements/letters after:
90 days	39%	44/112
120 days	33%	37/112
150 days	9%	10/112
180 days	6%	7/112
60 days	5%	6/112
I have no idea	1%	1/112
Do not use a collection agency	6%	7/112

Do you turn accounts over:
Monthly	55%	62/112
Quarterly	17%	19/112
When we can get a doctor to sit down and review accounts	16%	18/112
Semi-Annually	2%	2/112
Annually	2%	2/112
I have no idea	1%	1/112
Do not use a collection agency	7%	8/112

Whether physicians approve the accounts that are turned over is not necessarily a factor in how quickly accounts are given to the collection agency. A far larger percentage of respondents—47% (53/112)—indicated that physicians approve all accounts than the 16% (18/112) who had responded to an earlier question that accounts are turned over when we can get a doctor to approve them. The latter response seems to imply that the responsible physicians are at times too busy with other duties. Thirteen percent (15/112) of respondents said that some physicians approve accounts in their practice, while 33% (37/112) indicated no physician involvement, placing the responsibility with the managerial staff. Regardless of who approves accounts to be turned over, it is important to have a plan that everyone is prepared to follow.

Your Collection Agency: Let's Talk Money

---

We were surprised that in surgical practices, the largest group of respondents indicated that their practices turned over between $10,001 and $25,000 in 2005, and a clear majority—63% (70/112)—turned over $75,000 or less. We would have expected larger dollar amounts, since $10,000 can be only two unpaid surgeries. At the same time, most of our respondents indicated that their collection agencies collected $25,000 or less—65% (73/112)—on their behalf, the largest group of respondents collecting only $1,000 to $5,000. Details are in the tables below.

How much did you turn over to the collection agency in 2005?
$10,001-$25,000	27%	30/112
Less than $10,000	21%	23/112
$25,001-$75,000	15%	17/112
$75,001-$125,000	7%	8/112
$125,001-$250,000	5%	6/112
$250,001-$500,000	5%	5/112
Over $500,000	3%	3/112
I have no idea	11%	12/112
Do not use a collection agency	7%	8/112

The amounts collected by agencies hired by the respondents were surprisingly poor, which may be due to practices turning over accounts after they are more than 120 days past due, or due to poor patient demographics. However, the most alarming response to this question is the 16% of respondents who have no idea how much their collection agency actually collected!

How much did the collection agency collect on your behalf?
$1,000-$5,000	30%	34/112
$5,001-$25,000	21%	23/112
Less than $1,000	14%	16/112
$25,001-$50,000	5%	6/112
$50,001-$75,000	3%	3/112
More than $100,000	3%	3/112
$75,001-$100,000	1%	1/112
I have no idea	16%	18/112
Do not use a collection agency	7%	8/112

Not surprisingly, 38% of the respondents (42/112) are not satisfied with these results. Slightly fewer respondents—35% (39/112)—are satisfied, while the remaining 28% (31/112) indicated they did not have enough information to evaluate the situation. However, of the respondents to the next question, 53% (49/92) said that these results are consistent with the collection ratio their agency has achieved in previous years. Only 7% (6/92) said the results were not consistent, while 40% (37/92) had no idea. (These numbers do not include the 20 respondents who replied that the question was “not applicable.”) Obviously, some changes are due for a number of practices getting consistently unsatisfying results from their collection agencies.

One problem may be that the collection agency is underperforming. Another problem may be unrealistic expectations. In selecting a collection agency, it helps to have a clear and realistic picture of what you expect from one. While the average collection ratio of our respondents is roughly 20% (approximately $5,000 collected for $25,000 turned over), the largest group of respondents—24% (27/112)—expected a collection ratio of 21% to 30%, just above the average.

Unrealistic expectations lead to nothing but frustration.

What collection percentage do you expect from the agency?
21%-30%	24%	27/112
31%-40%	15%	17/112
11%-20%	11%	12/112
41%-50%	11%	12/112
Over 60%	11%	12/112
51%-60%	9%	10/112
0%-10%	4%	4/112
I have no idea	9%	10/112
Do not use a collection agency	7%	8/112

As for the cost of using a collection agency, 93% (97/104) of respondents who use a collection agency were charged a percentage of the collection, while only 4% (4/104) were charged a flat rate. Well over half of those who are charged a percentage—62% (62/100)—said they are charged between 21% and 40% of the amount collected.

Rates should be negotiable!

What percentage does your collection agency charge?
21%-30%	37%	37/112
31%-40%	25%	25/112
11%-20%	13%	13/112
41%-50%	10%	10/112
0%-10%	8%	8/112
I have no idea	7%	7/112

All things considered, most respondents—63% (71/112)—would recommend their collection agency to others, while 23% (26/112) would not.

Are you looking for another option? Look into Intelligent Collections at I.C. System. This agency is national, and they are endorsed by over 250 medical associations. Their ethics and varying types of services make them an excellent choice. Rates will vary depending on the level of service you request and the age of your accounts. I.C. System also has a useful list of questions to ask any collection company before you sign up.

Check them out at www.icsystem.com/kza.htm.